DEVOTED TO THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE SAN FERNANDO VALLEY

VOL. IX. GLENDALE (LOS ANGELES POSTOFFICE), LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CAL., FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1913. No. 4

MRS. FANNIE S. WADE

On Friday, May 9, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Colonel Ginger, 430 S. Adams St., Mrs. Fannie S. Wade passed from this life. Her health had been failing for some months and she came to Glendale, last November after vainly trying to regain her strength in a hospital in Pueblo, Colorado where her home had been for the past twenty seven years. In spite of the loving ministrations of her daughter and a nurse she did not grow stronger. On the Sunday before her death she suffered a stroke of paralysis and was unable to speak after that although she recognized those around her for a time. Her life went out just at the time when she was looking forward to a happy reunion with her youngest daughter and her grandchildren.

Mrs. Wade would have been sixty two years of age June 5 of this year. She was youthful in appearance and in spirit, a woman who enjoyed company and won the love of all who knew her. During her short residence in Glendale she drew to herself many friends who mourn that one so lovable should have been taken away.

Two daughters, Mrs. M. E. Madden of Pueblo, Col., Mrs. C. M. Penny of Needles, Cal., her grandson, Grover Haffner of the U. S. Navy and her granddaughter, Miss Mabel Haffner of Santa Barbara Normal reached her bedside too late to bid her farewell.

Mrs. Wade is mourned by five daughters, all of whom were devoted to her, Mrs. Ginger, Mrs. Madden, Mrs. Penny and Mrs. Nellie Allen of Needles. Cal., and Mrs. J. O. Albright of Fruitvale, Cal.

Until further arrangements are made the remains will repose in a vault in Forest Lawn cemetery.

FEDERATED BROTHERHOOD

The third big banquet of the Federated Brotherhood will be held Thursday evening, May 22, at 6:30 in Filger's opera house.

E. P. Ryland, president of the Church federation of Los Angeles, a fighter and one of the prime movers in the agitation which resulted in the "white slave investigation," will address the meeting along the line of "Social Problems."

Dr. Ryland is a man of broad view, tempered with a great heart and balanced by a judicial mind. The brotherhood counts itself especially fortunate in securing him for this address.

Fathers and all men interested in one of our most serious problems should avail themselves of this opportunity.

NEW PACIFIC ELECTRIC

The authentic announcement of the building of the new Pacific Electric railway which is to enter the city of Glendale at the southern part and have its terminus for the present in the business portion of West Broadway is bringing new life and real prosperity to all portions of the city. The points of argument in favor of the road are that it opens up a territory that is remote from any car line, and thus many new homes will be established in the territory adjacent to the new car line. The building of new houses will increase the valuation of the taxable property, and thus the final outcome will be that taxes will be less throughout the entire city.

It is on account of these reasons and many others that the property owners who have an enterprising make-up are so willingly aiding in raising the $40,000 necessary to make good the citizens' promises. For many weeks the office of Tupper-Robinson has been an exceedingly busy place preparing and mailing out instructions as to the apportionment compiled by the railroad committee. The main reward this committee is receiving for the faithful work they are doing is a prompt and willing response from the property owners. Following is the communication prepared by a joint committee of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce and the citizens' railroad committee. It reads as follows:

To the Owners of Glendale Property:

For the past two years the railway committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Glendale have been constantly interviewing the officials of the Pacific Electric Railway company in regard to building a line through the eastern part of our city, and after numerous interviews and strong representation from the committee and citizens of our city, we succeeded in securing an absolute promise from Mr. Paul Shoup, the president of the Pacific Electric company, to build the line, as per the following letter:

Los Angeles, Cal., March 4, 1913.

To the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Electric R. R. in Glendale:

Gentlemen:—Referring to various conferences held in my office be-

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The regular monthly meeting of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce was largely attended, Friday evening, May 9. The president, A. B. Heacock was present and presided in his usual concise and agreeable manner, Secretary W. B. Kirk who is the life of the association was present ably attending to the duties that devolve upon him. An accident with his spectacles interfered somewhat with his easy manner of disposing of business. Judge J. C. Sherer loaned his glasses to the secretary which fact brought the objection that by using these glasses the secretary might see auto speeders.

The question of when the "Join Us" division should give a banquet to the "Boosters" who won in the March contest for members was very generally discussed. The prevailing opinion seemed to be that there is no audience room in Glendale of sufficient space to accommodate all the guests who will attend the banquet. The committee of which Mr. Watson is the chairman will likely decide to hold the celebration in a park.

The matter of Glendale school girls being represented in the auto parade next Saturday forenoon was considered in a favorable manner. The chair appointed James Pearson, A. T. Cowan, W. B. Kirk, Prof. A. M. Brooks and H. A. Wilson as a committee to arrange for automobiles.

AUTOMOBILE THIEVES

Tuesday morning of this week, at half past three o'clock, automobile thieves visited the automobile house of H. A. Wilson, at 100 North Louise and took from his Maxwell touring car two tires, three inner tubes and a large tank of gasoline.

The next morning the gasoline tank was found in the eastern part of the city, empty. The burglars were in the act of removing the other tires when by some means they were frightened away. The burglars visited the Wilson place in an auto and it was when they started to leave that the noise of the machine awakened Mr. Wilson. Thinking some one had taken his machine from his garage, he arose and went to the scene of the trouble. here he found that the parts as mentioned above had been stolen. The city marshal was notified and a thorough search was made, but up to the present writing no clue as to who the guilty parties are has been learned.

Attorney Oliver Clark, who resides near the Wilson home. heard the noise of the auto at the time referred to, but thinking it was one of the residents using an auto, gave no special attention to what he heard. Mr. Wilson estimates his loss at $80.

ELADNELG STEAK-BAKE

On Saturday evening the gentlemen members of the Eladnelg club entertained the lady members with a steak-bake at Griffith park. A hot dinner, prepared and cooked by the hosts was served promptly at 6 o'clock. The evening was passed in climbing Bee rock by moonlight. Aside from the members, special guests were Mr. and Mrs. George B. Woodberry, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Pulliam, Mr. and Mrs. A. Stephenson, Miss Atala Browning and Mr. Shevis Mitchell.

On Thursday evening Miss Riffa Kinney will entertain the members of the club with a musical at her home on Seventh street.

REV. GEORGE TAYLOR

Rev. George Taylor, a retired Baptist minister residing at 107 N. Jackson St., died Monday, May 11, 1913. At the time of his death he was 63 years old, having been born in England, Feb. 14, 1850. Wednesday, accompanied by relatives and friends, the body was taken by auto hearse to Pasadena where funeral services were held at the Baptist church and the remains laid to rest in the Grand View cemetery.

BENJAMIN F. SPRAGUE

Benjamin F. Sprague of 303 Howard street passed away May 10, 1913, at the age of 62 years. Mr. Sprague was born in Maine May 12, 1856. He was well known in Glendale, where he resided for several years, having been a blacksmith by trade, employed by C. M. Lund. He was a member of the Odd Fellows' lodge and Glendale lodge No. 388 was in charge of the services, which were held at the Pulliam chapel Tuesday afternoon.

SAVINA DOWNING

Savina Downing was born in Indiana, January 25, 1867 and died at Patton, Cal., May 10, 1913 at the age of 46 years, 4 months and 5 days. The remains were brought to Glendale where the funeral services were held from the Friends' church on Tuesday afternoon, May 13 at 2 o'clock. Interment was in Grandview cemetery.

NEW GLENDALE DIRECTORY

Mr. Peter Scott of Los Angeles has been working in Glendale for several weeks, representing the Southern California Directory company. This company is getting out a new directory of Glendale, Tropico and Casa Verdugo, which will be issued some time in July. The work is about 60 per cent completed and Mr. Scott reports a remarkable increase in the population of Glendale.

TOM COX SURPRISED

About thirty of the young friends of Tox Cox gave him a pleasant surprise in honor of his birthday, at his home on Lomita avenue recently. Tom was informed by his mother that a friend wished his company at the Society Shop in honor of his birthday, and after making ready to go on this errand Tom entered the parlor of his home to find himself surrounded by his young friends. He was truly surprised, but nevertheless proved himself an entertaining host and welcomed his uninvited guests most cordially. The evening passed pleasantly and all too quickly in dancing and singing and in partaking of dainty refreshments. The guests were from Glendale and Los Angeles.

MR. PARCHER WITH VERNON BASKET COMPANY

Mr. W. Parcher of this city has recently become interested in the Vernon Basket company, a factory yet in its infancy, but steadily and surely growing. Mr. Parcher is acquainted with berry culture from A to Z. For six years he was president and general manager of the Berry Growers' association of Tropico. At that time the association consisted of 262 members and had under cultivation 1,600 acres of berries. Being interested in the general culture of berries and having kept in touch with the berry proposition for years, Mr. Parcher knows there will be a large yield of berries this year, with prospects for a larger yield next year. Hence the Vernon basket factory is looking forward to a good business. The factory now employs twenty girls and ten men and the capacity is 20,000 baskets a day. When all the machinery is installed the factory will have a capacity of 50,000 a day.

The company makes regular strawberry baskets, half-pound raspberry baskets, three-pound fruit baskets, five-pound grape and tomato baskets and shook and box material for all kinds of boxes. The lumber is all purchased in Washington and shipped by barge to San Pedro. The company covers the entire Southern California berry territory and is negotiating with parties as far north as Sacramento for grape baskets. The outlook is good not only from the fact of a large acreage of berries, but because of the company's good business methods and judgment. The factory is located at Fifty-second street and Santa Fe avenue.

INTERMEDIATE PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION

On Friday afternoon the regular meeting of the intermediate school, P. T. A., was held in the auditorium of the school building.

The usual business session was opened by the president, Dr. Jessie A. Russell. Mrs. C. D. Lusby, chairman of the membership committee reported thirty-three new members in three weeks. The co-operation of the pupils in securing new members for the association is especially commendable. The membership contest being held will close in another month. On Friday, June 6th, district reciprocity day will be held at Redondo Beach. The Glendale, Long Beach and Santa Monica federations will be hostesses of the day and in charge of the program. Everyone interested in the work of the Parent-Teacher federation is urged to attend.

The address of the afternoon was made by Miss Virginia Pease, principal of the Elementary Polytechnic high school of Pasadena. Owing to the fact that Miss Pease lives an unusually busy life she seldom finds time to address gatherings of any kind, and those who were not present to hear her missed a splendid talk. For over an hour Miss Pease held the spell-bound attention of her audience while she discussed her topic, "Things Worth While," dealing with the indifference of mothers in raising their children in the proper manner. Her speech was followed by a half hour of open discussion of her talk by all present.
much appreciation.

A most pleasing number was rendered by the Girls' Glee club of the school, which was received with

On Friday evening, May 16th, the association will give an art exhibit in the school building, and on May 14th the annual picnic will be held at La Ramada, the basket luncheon at noon to be the feature of the occasion.

KRINBILL-MARTIN MUSICALE

One of the really delightful functions of this week and one commanding the interest of many young and old alike, was the piano recital given by pupils of Clarence E. Krinbill, the local teacher, at the home of Anceal Martin on Kenwood street, last Monday evening. The house was most beautifully decorated with various flowers and these harmonizing with the many pretty gowns and prettier faces of youth, made a charming setting for the musical program.

The Martins are royal and lavish entertainers and added to the feast of music at its close a collation served with an accompaniment of professional caterers, which was a fitting climax to an ideal evening.

Where there is so much of merit in the different numbers of a program it would be in poor taste to comment individually; sufficient to say that each performer from the youngest to the older did admirably and reflected great credit upon themselves and their instructor.

A marked rhythmical appreciation and a singing quality of tone were marked features of all the pupils' work, and Mr. Krinbill is to be congratulated on the progress shown. Perhaps it would be only fair to say that the young host himself, Anceal, acquitted himself in his playing, especially well. The class of pupils interested were Alpha Prindle, Lynn McNutt, Mrs. J. H. Stacy, Dorothy Lee, Gladys Anderson, Hazel Flower, Aileen Preeman, Bessie Carney Leone Brice, Morse Preeman, Anceal Martin, Helen Mosher, Anna McIntyre, Doris Ingledew, Vera Kimball, Dorothy Dow, Evalyn Kent, Lena Mai Brice, Helen Ingledew, Mildred Elliott, Frank Hester, Ralston Bogan, Charles Edmundson. The assisting artists were all fine and their each appearance gave added charm to the occasion. Mrs. Gene Van Loon Bates, the reader, was exceedingly clever. With a thorough mastery of her art, she is decidedly unusual in her renditions and had her large audience completely entranced.

The vocalist was Alice Jessica Dixon, a Los Angeles soprano, with a beautiful voice, and her singing was a great treat.

Little Miss Merle Holmes, a concert violinist of eleven and a half years who plays marvelously well for a child of her age, and whose tone is really quite wonderful, completed a splendid trio of assistants. Such helpful musical, intellectual and social occasions are to be commended and encouraged.

DEATH OF MRS. H. D. CRUTCHER

Friends in this city were shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Winnie Crutcher of 131 S. Boyle St., Los Angeles, which occurred at the Osteopathic hospital, Monday, May 12, after a short illness.

Mrs. Crutcher was born in Michigan, August 12, 1882 and at the time of her death was thirty years of age. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her death, a little daughter, four years old and an infant son one month old. The Crutchers resided for several years in Glendale, Mr. Crutcher being employed in the Glendale pharmacy and they moved to Los Angeles only three months ago.

The funeral services were held at the grave in Forest Lawn cemetery, Wednesday morning, May 14 at 10 o'clock. The services were in charge of the I. O. O. F. lodge of Glendale, No. 388.

BERNARD BRYANT

Bernard B. Bryant was born in Vermont, January 19, 1834 and died at his home at 433 E. 3rd St., May 8, 1913 at the age of seventy nine years, four months and nineteen days. Mr. Bryant for years was employed in the service of various railroad companies but for the past few years had been residing in Glendale with his wife and daughter.

The funeral services were held at the residence, Friday afternoon at half past two. Interment was in the Grand View cemetery.

WM. THOMSON PLEASED

Wm. Thomson, who about two months ago came from Rockford, Ill., to Glendale with his family, is now the owner of the Glendale Bakery, located at 706 West Broadway. Mr. Honeysett, a professional baker, also formerly of Rockford. is the head baker, which is sufficient evidence that a good quality of bakery goods is being turned out. The Glendale Bakery has three wagons on the road and each has a good patronage.

Mr. Thomson says the store business has greatly increased since he engaged in the business, and the main cause of this is that citizens of Glendale are learning that the Glendale Bakery goods are as good, if not a little better, than those bought from Los Angeles firms.

BAND CONCERT

The Glendale concert band will give a free concert from the steps of the city hall Thursday evening, May 22, commencing at 8 o'clock. The Glendale band is comprised of eighteen members, all of whom are musicians of experience and ability. The leader and instructor is T. J. McDermott, a distinguished musician. On Thursday evening, May 29, the band will give a free concert on the boulevard. There is a strong sentiment among the business men and the citizens of Glendale in general to rally to the support of the local band. There is no organization that aids a town more than a good band.

HONOR BRIDE-ELECT

Mrs. Godfrey Edwards of Eagle Rock entertained Miss Marie McDonald, a charming bride of the 20th of this month, and a party of friends at a most delightful luncheon at the Jonathan club, Saturday, May 10. The table decorations were of pink sweet peas and maiden hair fern and the place cards were of wedding bells. The lovely eight-course luncheon was served in accordance with the occasion. The luncheon was followed by the party attending the matinee at the Orpheum. Those in the party were Mrs. Godfrey Edwards, the hostess; Miss Marie McDonald, the complimented guest; Mrs. Rebecca McDonald and Miss Maizie McDonald, mother and sister of the bride-elect; Mrs. Harry S. Bourne, mother of the groom-to-be; Mrs. Mary Hickson, Mrs. Fred Schneider, Mrs. Lawrence Edwards and Miss Cormack, all of Eagle Rock.

TOWEL SHOWER

The third of a series of pretty events being given in honor of Miss Mabel Evans was that given on Tuesday afternoon in the charming home of Miss George Duffet, 1008 Chestnut street.

Myriads and myriads of glowing "Dream of Gold" roses were arranged with streamers of yellow satin ribbon and a profusion of foliage.

Music and guessing games were a happy diversion during the afternoon. A handsome hand embroidered towel was given as the prize in the towel guessing contest.

Numerous dainty packages were hidden in every nook and crevice of the beautiful yard and the complimented guest spent a merry half hour searching for them. They proved to contain many handsome towels of every kind and description.

Tea was then served at a delightfully adorned table, centered by a bank of lovely yellow roses and ferns.

Those who were present during the pretty afternoon were Miss Mable Evans, honor guest; Miss Mary Jane Evans, Miss Alma Turner, Miss Violet Turner, Miss Esther Jones, Miss Eunice Jones, Miss Jean McNutt, Miss Lynn McNutt, Miss Dorothy Hobbs, Miss Katherine Hobbs, Miss Emily Ellias, Miss Leita McCoy, Miss Blanche Lyons, Miss Rae Davis, Miss Ruth Brown, Miss Alpha Clement, Miss Harriet Bayard, Miss Luella Moore, Mrs. William Livingston and the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. T. G. Huff.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB

The Tuesday Afternoon club enjoyed a very interesting program at its last meeting, the same being in charge of the literary section, Mrs. Frank Grosvenor acting as chairman.

Little Miss Marian Pearson, one of Mrs. Warren Roberts' pupils, very charmingly rendered the "Melody in F," by Kussner, and a polka by T. Van Berg.

Mrs. G. H. Rowe reviewed "The House of Rimmon," by Van Dyke, and Mrs. Carl Mertens gave readings from the same author.

Mrs. Rankin gave citations from Emerson's essays.

Following the program the nomination of officers for the coming year was taken up and the following ladies were nominated:

For President—Mrs. M. B. Jones, Mrs. Dan Campbell and Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson.

For Vice President—Mrs. E. D. Goode, Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson and Mrs. M. B. Jones.

LEWIS-GILES WEDDING

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Wilbur Hatton Lewis to Miss Edith Estella Giles at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. MacMullin, 1560 Sycamore avenue, Wednesday, May 21. This young couple has the good wishes of numerous friends.

MACDONALD TRANSFER CO.

The Macdonald Transfer company of Glendale, recently incorporated under the laws of California, with capital of $25,000, is doing a big business. The company already has in operation five new auto trucks, one being a three-ton vehicle, which is being used mainly for transporting heavy articles to and from Los Angeles. The others are of lighter build and are used in the package delivery system which has just been inaugurated by the company. The Glendale merchants, especially the grocerymen, have adopted the modern way of having a common delivery operated by the same company. This new feature, which was commenced Monday, May 5, was made possible on account of the enterprise of the Macdonald Transfer company. Some of the merchants who have adopted the new system of making deliveries say the cost of the new way is only about half the expense of the old way of delivering.

David Macdonald is the president of the new company and C. W. Taylor is the secretary. The office is at 1114 West Broadway, in the First National bank building.

P. E. O.

An all-day meeting of Chapter L was enjoyed on Thursday, at the home of Mrs. E. U. Emery. The morning session was devoted to a business meeting, conducted by the president, Mrs. Elizabeth Brown. Matters which will come before the state convention at San Diego during this week were thoroughly discussed.

Recess was called at noon and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed, during which a delicious luncheon was served.

The afternoon was passed with an interesting discussion of domestic economy topics. Miss Mary Blackburn spoke on the subject of the "House Beautiful," Mrs. Frank Albright gave an interesting talk on the "Conservation of Nerve Force," and Mrs. E. D. Goode lead a discussion of kitchen marketing.

The meeting proved to be one of the most enjoyable of the year.

DEATH OF J. E. ANDERSON

John Edwin Anderson passed away in Glendale, Cal., Saturday, May 10, 1913, at the age of 35 years, 6 months and 17 days. He was born in Boston, Mass., October 23, 1877, and had resided in Glendale for the past year and a half. During his residence here he was employed as bookkeeper for the Kalem Moving Picture company. He made a valiant and courageous fight against the dreaded white plague, but was forced to give up the struggle.

hands of the inimy. But he fit off the whole gang until we came up an' got the papers."

"And Captain Heartsease?"

"Shot down at his side, sor. May be dead—I dunno. But please don't say anything to Miss Jenny yet. She'll foind out soon enough. Och! Me arm is hurted. Sure, I forgot the sentry entirely, but he didn't forget me."

"12—22—11!" a signalman on the knoll called, reading the torch wig-wagging on the distant mountain top.

CHAPTER XV.

"It's Only a Battle!"

"Colonel West," said the general, "we must get Lieutenant Bedloe in exchange at any sacrifice if he is still alive. Let's see—why, there is Colonel Robert Ellingham, our prisoner. We might offer him in exchange if he would go."

"Surely! Bob will go in a minute; I know he will. I will find him and ride to the front with him myself, general."

"At once, then! Can you follow the dispatch, Captain Lockwood?"

"Perfectly, general. Everything is here in the book."

"11—22—1—12!" shouted the signalman.

"'General Longstreet is coming!'"

"Longstreet! I feared that!"

"1—21—3!"

"'With 18,000 men.'"

"Longstreet with his corps."

"2—22—11—1—12—1."

"'We will crush Sheridan's army.'"

"Aha!" cried General Haverill, stirred to deady energy. "Now, men, signal that dispatch up the valley to our own station. Ten them to send couriers and catch Sheridan with it at Front Royal. They must catch him, so that he can hasten back with the cavalry. Major Burton, order our horses, we will ride to General Wright's headquarters at once."

General Haverill, while awaiting the horses, watched Captain Lockwood and his men lighting pine wood torches attached to long poles to flash their signals up the valley. Another minue and Barket returned with Robert Ellingham, the two supporting between them Kerchival West, white faced and with his coat thrown open, a crimson stain on his shirt front.

"There, Bob, I'll be all right now," he was murmuring faintly. "It's only the loss of blood that upset me. I got a scratch of the knife, that's all."

"Go for a surgeon, somebody," said Colonel Ellingham as they helped Kerchival to the seat. "The fellow has knifed him. But they've got the wretch!"

Corporal Dunn and his guard dragged in Edward Thornton for the second time that day.

"We were leaving the house together," explained Ellingham, "when this wild beast sprang out upon us from the bushes."

"This is murder, not war!" exclaimed General Haverill, turning to Thornton, who, in his shirt sleeves, torn and disheveled, looked a fearsome picture of diabolical malice. "If you have killed him"—

"Oh, do what you like with me. My account is settled," retorted Thornton, watching with an evil smile as Ellingham handed to General Haverill a wallet and a minature case, saying:

"I took these from Kerchival's breast pocket when he fell."

"My wife's portrait!" muttered the general, with an involuntary gesture of despair.

"You recognize the precious keepsake, general?" sneered Thornton. "So, you see, if I have killed him, your honor will be buried in the same grave."

Gertrude Ellingham ran out from the house. She had come to bid her brother, Robert, goodby. She saw him now in the lurid glare of the pine knots, bending over the prostrate form of the wounded Union officer.

"Robert!" she cried. "I heard them calling for a surgeon. Who is hurt? You are safe, aren't you—ah, Kerchival!" With a scream she fell on her knees by his side, uttering wild, tender words as she stroked the dark hair from his pallid forehead.

"Oh, Kerchival, dear, I never meant those bitter words I said to you. Forget them and forgive me, won't you? Do you hear me? I love you! I have loved you all the time!"

General Haverill heard no more. He did not look around as Thornton was hustled away in irons, but sprang into his saddle and dashed off down the black road after the staff officers, who at his own impatient order had preceded him.

The night of October 18 was full of inquietude and alarms for the inmates of Belle Bosquet. A Federal guard was posted there, and Barket served as courier. Neither Jenny nor Madeline West would think now of going on to Winchester, with Kerchival West in a precarious condition and the fate of Captain Heartsease still uncertain. General Haverill did not return to the house, but joined General Buckthorn at the front, where, it was understood, General Wright was making every possible preparation pending the return of Sheridan, for guarding against and resisting an attack upon his right, which was the only point at which he apprehended immediate trouble.

Before daybreak on the morning of the 19th Madeline and Gertrude, who occupied a room together, were awakened by firing in the distance up the valley to the southward. Jenny Buckthorn, in an adjoining chamber, heard their voices and joined them for companionship and sympathy. Alas, what a changed, subdued Jenny within the last twenty-four hours!

The girls dressed hurriedly in silence and came downstairs. Already Kerchival West, haggard and excited looking, was pacing the veranda like a caged animal. Barket had been down to the pike for reconnoisance and now came back with startling news.

"It's a battle, sure!" he said. "An' Sheridan away, the divil only knows where. Begob, they must have attacked by surprise before the screech o' dawn, judgin' from"—

"Who has attacked? Who is surprised?" demanded Kerchival with furious impatience.

"The inimy has attacked us, sor, an' what's more, they 'sem to be drivin' things before 'em. By the direction of the firin' it should be our left flank they've pounced upon instead of the right, where they were dacintly ixpected. Sure, thim rebels have no politeness nohow"—

"Do you mean to say our troops are falling back?"

"Well, sor, I did hear some cavalry gallopin' down the pike, but whether it was ours or theirs or only Mosby's gorillas, that I can't tell yez."

"Then I'll go and find out for myself!" Kerchival cried fiercely, making a move into the hallway for his hat. The sudden exertion proved too much for him, and he sank into a chair, clutching with one hand at his breast.

"Hark! There is the firing again, worse than ever, and it is coming nearer," said Gertrude, unconscious of a certain exultation in her tone. "If General Longstreet only has—I mean, if really he"—

"He can never drive General Sheridan back—of that I am certain," spoke up Madeline with unwonted spirit.

"Let us go—oh, pardon, Gertrude—ladies—I beg," said Kerchival, starting up, then at once seating himself again.

But they all had risen, as impatient as he was, and hurried out.

Kerchival and Gertrude took the path up the elevation to where the big cottonwood tree overlooked the valley. Jenny and Madeline lingered on the veranda.

"Go on, go on!" muttered Kerchival, instinctively feeling for his sword and looking loweringly in the direction from which came the roar of the guns. "Fight to a finish and have it over. Keep the battle to yourselves. I'm out of it."

"Kerchival," said Gertrude, "your sister Madeline says that now she must pray for the man she loves, enemy or no enemy."

"And she is right. Anything else would be worse than treason. I can't pray. Can you, Gertrude?"

"Yes. Ah, Kerchival!"

He leaned against the tree, his hand clutching at his breast again.

"Your wound! Let me call the surgeon, Kerchival."

"Wound! I have no wound to bother about now. You love me?"

"Look! There are soldiers running through the woods. Oh, what shall we do?"

The firing, very close now, was faster and more furious than ever. It seemed to have given Kerchival West new breath of life.

"Never mind that!" he cried deliriously. "It's only a battle! Say that you love me!"

"Be quiet, Kerchival, dear. I do love you. I said so last night before every one, only you didn't hear me. I said the same thing at Charleston when first we met. And some one I told wrote it in a letter—that letter which General Buckthorn gave you and told you not to read unless I became unruly. I am not unruly, am I, dear?"

"No, my precious girl!" Nothing can separate us now. That letter"—he searched in his pockets, but could not find it. "Ah, I remember! They must have taken it when I was laid out by Thornton's dagger. And—a miniature I had—that's gone, too!"

Josephus Orangeblossom on a mule without saddle dashed up from the direction of the pike, shouting:

"Miss Gertrude, Marse Bob, he done get a gyard aroun' dis house, but 'tain't no use now, for de Yanks is runnin' away. We's got 'em licked; we sho' has!"

"Begob, the Naygur's right," confirmed Sergeant Barket. "The grayback divils have sprung up out of the ground. They're pourin' over our lift flank like Noah's own flood. Our camp is wiped out, an' they've got our guns an' wagons an' wounded an' prisoners, an' the whole Union army is a-startin' to beat it down the pike for Winchester, worse luck! Colonel West, yonder is your own regiment in full retrate!"

"My regiment!" roared Kerchival, jumping up. "Great God, no! Get my horse, Barket! I'll stop that or"—

"Yer harse, is it? Hooroo! I'm wid ye, colonel! There's a row at Finnegan's ball, an' we're goin' to be in it!"

"Kerchival," pleaded Gertrude, throwing her arms around him, "you must not go! You may be dying!"

"Dying, nothing. I'm all right now, Gertrude, my life! My regiment won't retreat any further unless it retreats over my dead body!"

"Here's yer horse, colonel! Now give me that mule, ye black contraband naygur!" called Barket, wild with joy, to the rolling eyed Josephus.

"Goodby, Gertrude, darling! Tell Madeline! Pray for us!"

And two flying figures hurled themselves down the hillside into the roaring maelstrom of battle that filled the valley.

CHAPTER XVI.

"Tell how I died, not how I lived."

But before the events of the preceding chapter—before the avowal or Kerchival's love and his dash into the battle—had ensued a scene which threatened to change several lives, a scene which made West's rash deed rank insubordination against his commanding officer.

Bright and early the morning after the exciting combination of events at Belle Bosquet—the reading of the signals, the exchange of Colonel Robert Ellinghamm for the wounded Lieutenant Bedloe and the murderous attack of Captain Edward Thornton of the Confederate secret service upon Colonel Kerchival West—a turmoil of action manifested itself in the Union regimental camp at that point. As a result of the night's conference of Generals Buckthorn and Haverill with General Wright, Colonel West's regiment had been ordered to the front

"Ah, Haverill," said General Buckthorn as that officer came out on the verandah, "maybe Sherman is right, after all. The reconnoissances this morning show no hostile force on our right, and Crook reports that Early is retreating up the valley. But General Wright is making some changes in our line this afternoon, and in the meantime I warn you to order General McCuen to go into camp on the right of Meadow Brook, with the second division. Jenny, girl, don't bother me about Heartsease now. Order the Third brigade of cavalry, under Colonel Lowell, to occupy the left of the pike. We'd better hold Custer on the second line, at Old Forge road, until further instructions. That it all for the present. Goodby, Jennie, my darling. General, I bid you good day."

General Haverill, who had carefully written the foregoing orders in his notebook, watched General Buckthorn off, then asked Jenny as she re-entered the house if she would send Gertrude to him.

"Gertrude, my child," he said with unwonted gravity, "the surgeons tell me that Kerchival West will get on well enough if he remains quiet; otherwise not."

"That is what is worrying me, general," Gertrude replied. "Colonel West insists upon preparing to join his regiment at the front. I hope you will order him to remain here—compel him to be prudent."

"He should not look for the honor of death on the field under present circumstances," muttered the general, with peculiar significance.

"What do you mean, sir?" inquired Gertrude uneasily.

"You have a right to ask me that as your father's old friend, once your own guardian. Gertrude, child, you have a warm, true heart. I could not bear to see your happiness destroyed through very loyalty to your heart's affection. Listen. Last night I saw you kneeling beside Kerchival West, speaking to him, ministering to him with all the tender passion of a southern woman. You told him that you loved him. But those fateful words fell upon unconscious ears. Tell me, has he ever heard those words from your own lips? Have you ever confessed your love to him before?"

"Never—since you ask me. But why, General Haverill, do you ask?"

"Never mind. Only do not repeat it Keep your heart to yourself, my girl."

"But, general, at a moment like this when his life"——

"Leave that to me—hush!"

The voice of Colonel West himself, heard outside, giving orders to a sergeant to get his horse ready, silenced them. He then came up in full uniform and wearing his sword and saluted His face was pale, but he presented a brave front.

"Are there any orders, general, for my regiment," he asked, "beyond those given to Major Williams in my absence this morning? I am going to the front to resume my command."

"It is my wish, colonel, that you remain here under the surgeon's care," said the general quietly.

"Oh, my wound is a mere trifle. I could not rest here. I must be with my men at this perhaps critical moment in the campaign."

"I have told you my wish is to the contrary," pepeated General Haverill.

Kerchival knew only too well that ominous, quiet reserve. He knew the inflexibility of that proud, intolerant mood. He could not wholly fathom its cause, but a troublesome recollection suddenly occurred to him.

"General," he said, with grieved earnestness, after looking around to see that Gertrude had silently withdrawn, "I was unable to keep my appointment with you last night for an unforseen reason, which you know. I am ready and willing to explain certain matters, as you requested me to do yesterday. But meanwhile a crisis has developed, and whatever there may be between us personally you are now in the position of interfering with my duty and my privilege as a soldier. It is my right to be at the head of my regiment so long as I am physically able."

"You have my positive order, sir!"

"Then I protest!"

"You are under arrest, sir!" said tone.

Kerchival started as if he had been shot. Then in a deliberate, dazed way he unclasped his belt and offered his sword.

"No; keep your sword. I have no desire to humiliate you," the general continued in a low voice. "But you will hold yourself subject to further orders from me."

With these inexorable words he turned away, while Kerchival, as if suddenly a sick man again, started to re-enter the house. He met Gertrude at the door, all gentleness and commiseration.

"Did you hear what the general said?" he asked feebly.

"No matter what he said or what any one says now, Kerchival," was her impulsive response. "You have my perfect faith—there! Now you must go to your room and rest until the surgeon comes again."

He obeyed in silence. What words could he find?

Looking out from her window a few minutes later, Gertrude was startled to see a number of men emerging from the woods by the path leading up from the ford. Then she perceived that they were Confederate soldiers under a flag of truce, following an escort of Union troops and carrying some burden. It proved to be a stretcher, on which loy the unconscious form of a young man, evidently a wounded Federal officer. A surgeon walked beside the stretcher, giving directions to the bearers, who rested a short distance from the verandah steps. Gertrude ran to the door, followed by Madeline West and Jenny Buckthorn. Sergeant Barket also stood, wonder struck, on a sort of improvised sentry guard.

"I am Major Hardwick of the Confederate service," said the surgeon, hat in hand and losing no time. "Is General Haverill here?"

"He left but a moment ago"——

"He's just after mounting his horse," put in Barket, "an' I can cut across an' stop him for yez."

"Please say to him that we come from Colonel Robert Ellingham, who instructed me to bring this young officer in exchange for himself, as agreed upon between them last evening."

"Is he unconscious or sleeping, sir?" asked Gertrude, looking with tender solicitude upon the pallid face on the rude rustic litter

"He is between life and death; I fear. The removal has been too much for him, yet it seemed best under the circumstances. He was so anxious—ah, he is waking! Here we are, my boy," placing his canteen to the lips of poor Lieutenant Bedloe, for he is was in such grevious plight. "We have reached the end of our journey."

"My father"—gasped Frank.

"He is thinking of his home," said Major Hardwick.

"I have obeyed General Haverill's orders," murmured the young man faintly, "and I have a report to make."

"He will be here in a moment," answered Gertrude.

"Is not this—Miss Gertrude Ellingham?" he asked, looking wistfully into her face.

LITTLE BROWN HANDS

They drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long, shady lane,
Where the quail whistles loud in the wheat fields,
That are yellow with ripening grain,
They find, in the thick, waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-lipped strawberry grows.
They gather the earliest snowdrops
And the first crimson buds of the rose.

They toss the new hay in the meadow;
They gather elderbloom white;
They find where the dusky grapes purple
In the soft-tinted October light;
They know where the apples hang ripest
And are sweeter than Italy's wines
They know where the fruit hangs thickest
On the long, thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate sea-weeds,
And build tiny castles of sand;
They pick up the beautiful seashells,
Fairy barks that have drifted to land—
They wave from the tall, rocking tree-tops,
Where the oriole's hammock nest swings,
And at night time are folded in slumber
By a song that a fond mother sings.

Those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great;
And so from these brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and wise of the land—
The sword, and the chisel, and palette.
Will be held in the little brown hand.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Keep a few pieces of camphor gum in your linen closet; it will aid in keeping the linen white.

If fish is wrapped well in oiled paper it will not impart a flavor or odor to the other foodstuffs in the refrigerator.

To revive and help potted plants that are drooping place a teaspoonful of ammonia in three quarts of water and water the plants thoroughly with this mixture.

To clean plaster busts dip them into cold liquid starch; when dry, the starch is brushed off and the dirt comes off with it, leaving the busts as clean and white as when new.

A solution of chloride of lime and water, a tablespoonful of the lime to two gallons of water, is an excellent medium for removing the most stubborn stains. Soak the stained garment for hours in the solution and in time the offending spots will disappear, and this without injury to the fabric.

To make butter scotch, mix four cupfuls of brown sugar, two cupfuls of butter and three tablespoonfuls of water and boil until crisp in water.

Brass or copper may be easily cleaned by rubbing with a wet, soapy rag dipped in powdered bath brick. Polish with a soft, dry cloth or a newspaper.

A quick way to mark linen, sheets, etc., is to write the name in pencil, then stitch over the linen with a sewing machine, using a coarse thread and a long stitch.

Cod liver oil stains on linen may be eradicated by soaking the marks with equal parts of liquid ammonia and hot water, mixed. Afterward wash with soft water and soap

Cabbage water is the cause of disagreeable smells when it is not thrown away. To avoid the smell, some people put a piece of charcoal in with the cabbage when boiling.

For a sardine cocktail, a novel dish, prepare cocktail sauce in a glass surrounded by ice, as in an oyster cocktail. Then cut sardines in pieces about an inch long. Serve in the sauce.

Some people use the whites as well as the yolks of eggs in making mayonnaise. Just before serving the mayonnaise the white of the egg is whipped stiff and beaten into the dressing.

SCALLOPED SALMON

One can of salmon, half a pound of any kind of friable crackers, three eggs beaten light, one teaspoonful of butter, broken into tiny bits and scattered upon the surface of the scallop. Pepper to taste. Soak the crackers in milk or water, after crushing them fine. Chop the salmon or pick it to pieces with a silver fork. Arrange in alternate layers in a buttered dish with milk. The scallop should be quite soft. Bake twenty minutes in a brisk oven.

A NEW DEFINITION

"Mary," said the teacher, "what is the spinal column?"

"The spinal column," said Mary, "is what my head sits on one end of and I sit on the other."

A MEAL IN ITSELF

Boil one-quarter pound of macaroni is slightly salted water until tender. Grate cheese over it, add a tablespoonful of cold stewed tomato, then a light layer of chopped meat. Season with salt, pepper and a little cold gravy and small pieces of butter. Repeat this until the dish is full, adding milk to moisten. Bake about a half hour. This is nutritious and good.

EGG EN FROMAGE

If desired this dish can be made at the table in a chafing dish. Melt one tablespoonful of butter and add one small cupful of grated dry cheese; stir constantly until the cheese is creamed. Have broken and slightly beaten six eggs and add to cheese and butter. Salt and a dash of cayenne pepper should be added while stirring. Cook until the eggs are "scrambled."

PEAS IN CASES

New peas may be daintily served in cases made of mashed potatoes. Mash the potatoes nicely, stiffen the mass by adding flour, season with salt and pepper and bake it in fluted cake tins, placing a bit of bread in the center of each to keep the cases in shape and removing it as soon as all the shell is baked. Then prepare the peas in the following manner: Cook a pint of shelled peas in just as much water as will keep them from burning. Do not cover kettle while cooking any green vegetable, as the confined steam will always change the color to a yellowish shade of green. When the peas are tender add a teaspoonful of flour into which has been rubbed a tablespoonful of butter; as soon as the liquor has been thickened by the paste season with a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper; pour into the cases and serve hot.

Pare and slice three oranges and two apples; serve on lettuce with mayonnaise sauce made as follows: One egg beaten light and add olive oil and lemon juice alternately, a few drops at a time, beating steadily until it is the consistency of thick cream. Throw in a dash of cayenne pepper.

RECIPE FOR NUT BREAD

One beaten egg, half a cupful of sugar, one cupful of sweet milk, one-half cupful of ground walnuts, a level teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted twice with two cupfuls of flour. Mix all well together, put into a buttered baking pan and let it rise half an hour. Bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

PRUNE PIE RECIPE

To the whites of three eggs whipped to a stiff froth add a cupful of cooked prunes stoned and run through a meat grinder; three tablespoonfuls of sugar; one tablespoonful of vanilla extract. Beat well and long, and bake in a lower pie crust. This is enough for one pie.

THE WHITE CAP

(Isabel Ecclestone Mackay)

One day a baby wave was born.
Child of the tide was she,
Safe circled by the warm young morn
And cradled in the sea.

And, oh, it was a pleasant thing
The bright new world to know,
To wonder at the gull's wet wing
And why it sparkled so!

To smile back at the sky who sent
A dress of dainty blue,
To thank the wind, who, chuckling, lent
A neat white cap or two.

Then came the kindly moon, who gave
A chain of jewels bright.
(For every little baby wave
Wears shining things at night!)

And oh, 'twas just as sweet to lie
Beneath the dancing stars,
To watch the glistening ships sail by
With silver on their spars!

To chase the boats of fishermen
And spatter them with spray,
To lift them high, so high! And then
To laugh and run away!

'Twas harmless fun, but—whisper low—
That cap the sky wind lent
Held magic, and it made her grow
Quite wild and turbulent!

So when the kind moon went away
She took her diamonds, too;
The angry sky grew cold and gray,
And took the dress of blue.

The naughty wave began to fear,
And sought her mother's lap.
"My child, the cause is very clear.
Take off that saucy cap!"

And when the cap was off, the day
Grew bright, the sky was fair,
And fast asleep the wavelet lay
With sunbeams in her hair!

Patience and hustle should make a winning team.

EAGLE ROCK

Work was commenced the past week on a new business block near the postoffice, to be completed about the first of June. A part will be occupied by a dry goods and notion store, while the Eagle Rock Bake Shop will occupy the balance.

It is understood that the owner of the lot west of the Foster block contemplates in the near future the erection of a business building, the lower floor of which will be fitted out for a moving picture theater.

Concrete work on Hannaford's new plumbing and garage establishment which was done by Contractor A. A. House, was completed the past week and the building will soon be ready for occupancy. City building ordinances do not cover the erection of reinforced concrete structures, but the builder, Fred Schleuter, and Contractor House have put up a structure that would meet the most exacting demands necessary in a well-erected building.

One of the new Occidental college buildings is all under roof and nearing completion, while the second is nearly so, and a third is being erected. All will be fine imposing structures.

Wonder is Eagle Rock is going to have a hotel or has the proposition been dropped? Several months have elapsed since a party was heard to remark in one of our business places to the effect that if you find us a competent hotel manager we're ready to put up a $15,000 building at once.

It is rumored that the Chaffee Basket Grocery company contemplates the establishment of a basket grocery in Eagle Rock.

The Women's Choral club and Women's Twentieth Century club are planning on giving an entertainment on the evening of Tuesday, May 27. It will be in the nature of a Cafe Chanton. Profits will be divided between the two clubs. It is understood that the Women's Twentieth Century club will erect a fine club house on Colorado boulevard soon.

Twelve building permits were issued for the month of April, the total valuation being $20,000.

Rev. C. A. Bunker, pastor of the M. E. church, was absent from his pulpit and will also be away next Sunday. Rev. Conneway took his place Sunday and a substitute will be here for the coming Sunday.

Sunday, the 11th, being Mothers' day, special song services were held at both the Methodist and Congregational churches. Everyone wore a white carnation as a token of respect.

Five lots in Campus park are reported to have been sold to J. Hebel. Consideration, $6,500. The knoll just north of the college buildings has been sold to Calvin Esterly, a member of the faculty of the college, and he will at once erect a fine residence. Consideration, $2,250. Two lots on the southwest corner of Castil avenue and Johnston street have been sold to the Pasadena Ice company, which will be improved by a business building.

In the neighborhood of twenty-five or more new houses are being constructed in Eagle Rock, besides two or three business blocks.

A Christian Endeavor society was organized at the Congregational church last Sunday evening.

The Sawtelle boosters struck Eagle Rock on their booster day tour Tuesday and were royally received by our citizens. A reception committee awaited the thirty-five autoloads of Sawtellites and besides being given the glad hand, various refreshments were served to the visitors.

Editor and Mrs. W. L. Miller of the Eagle Rock Sentinel leave Thursday evening to join the editors on their five days' trip through the Yosemite valley. This is a well earned vacation for Mr. and Mrs. Miller.

Celia—"So glad to find you in. Is your husband well?"

Gladys—"I don't know. You see, I heard he was out motoring with another woman, and I've just sent my six-foot brother to find out. That's why I don't know how well he is."

"Hubby, did you bring home my new switch?"
"Yep."
"And my puffs?"
"I did."
"How about my face powder?"
"Here's your complexion. Now get busy and assemble yourself."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

By Samuel Parker.

Highest of all in the Temple of Fame,
See our illustrious Commoner's name.
Far more enduring than monument arts
Is love for our Lincoln enshrined in our hearts.

His motto, "Keep close to the people" commands
Attention of rulers in less favored lands;
Hope for the people that sentiment brings
And modifies rule of the Czars and the Kings.

Patriot fires burn anew in each breast,
Peace crowns the land that in dying he blest.
Pledge we anew that the people shall rule,
Stand by the home and the flag and the school.

The joy late coming late departs.
—Lewis J. Bates.

City Clerk and Ex-officio Clerk of the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale, California.

The original and energetic manager of "The Ditch Shop" has shown further originality by erecting an old-fashioned Dutch windmill on the upper front of the building. On the arms of the mill are appropriate business lettering and a light appears at night in the windows of the little house on top. A great sign for "The Dutch Shop."—Burbank Review.

"You don't mean to tell me that you are going to wear a mixture of red, brown and yellow puffs."

"For one evening only," replied the bride. "I had these made from the various locks of hair that my husband had on hand when I married him. The original donors will all be at the ball tonight."

Bald-headed man, in the witness box: "The uproar was so terrible that it made my hair stand on end." Judge severely: "Be good enough to remember that you are on oath!"

MEMORIAL DAY

This annual event is upon us—only two weeks away. Preliminary service by the churches will be held on the 25th and exercises in the public schools will be duly looked after. To keep the contest and its results conspicuously before the children and youth is of the highest importance.

LONG SESSION

After a long and strenuous session, the California legislature has finally adjourned "sine die." The work of the assembly has been mixed. Some very good and wise measures were enacted and some equally good failed of passage, but on the whole, some advance was made in legislating in the interests of the people.

BY DIRECT VOTE

Thirty-six states having passed the necessary preliminary legislation, the president soon will issue a proclamation declaring that United States senators hereafter will be elected by the direct vote of the electors of the respective states. This is genuine progress.

AUCTION SALE

Saturday, May 17, commencing at 10 a. m., corner of Third and Orange streets, Glendale, California, a lot of good furniture and books. The books would be very suitable for a minister's library. See bills for full list of furniture and books.

ELMER K. FISHER.

Silence never shows itself to so great advantage as when it is made to reply to calumny and defamation, provided that we give no just occasion for them.—Addison.

"MOTHER"

The poem, "Mother," in the last issue of The News was not only appropriate to the day, but the sentiments expressed therein evoked many warm commendations for the venerable writer.

"WHEN OWEN OPENS HIS MOUTH"

A big time may be confidently expected at the celebration next month, when the water from Owens river is formally let into the big reservoir at San Fernando. A long list of distinguished national and inter-national guests have been invited.

JAPAN

Sixty years ago very little was known about Japan by the world outside. She was a "sealed book" except to such countries as she desired to trade with, and she was careful in the selection of these, generally getting the best of the bargain. Her very well-guarded seclusion served only to increase the desire of other nations to "trade with the cunning little Japs." And the "little Japs," proud of the distinction and notoriety thus obtained, "coquetted" to the limit, but kept up the bars until 1854, when the United States sent an expedition over on a peace treaty trading mission, which said: "Please let us in, Miss Japan, and we will do you good."

This expedition was under the management of Hon. Anson Burlingame of New York and consisted of quite a convoy of the best we had at that date of naval architecture, but the cargo was commerce, not cannon.

The Japs permitted them to land and display their wares, which consisted of a miniature railroad eight miles in length, a printing press, a school house, a full line of agricultural machinery and a vast quantity of bric-a-brac, well calculated to impress Miss Japan, and it did.

From that date Japan may be called an "open country," and we (the United States) have been boastful of it. "See our lovely adopted daughter, Japan; isn't she pretty?" And Japan lost no time in making the most of the situation. Back with the Burlingame expedition came some of Japan's smartest young men and modestly entered our colleges and universities and technical schools—absorbing every item that would enrich the home land, especially in the line of mechanic arts, and if there is a more ingenious people than our own Yankees, on earth today, it is the Japanese.

What "irony of fate" is it that has brought about the changed relations between this country and Japan in the brief space of sixty years? Then we entreated Japan to open her doors—today we are striving to close ours on her. And our beloved daughter seems quite disposed to slap her mother's face? "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child." How destructive of family happiness it is to have a dominating dictatorial parent. Pater says: "We could rush our Atlantic fleet through the canal in sixty days." The "kid" says: "We could take the Philippines, Honolulu, Hawaii and sack the Pacific coast in forty days." Meantime every one should quote Dr. Watts: "Children, you should never let your angry passions rise."

NEW PACIFIC ELECTRIC

tween your committee and myself and our chief engineer, George E. Pillsbury. This will confirm the understanding reached that whenever the terms as agreed between your committee and our chief engineer and myself as to the rights of way, terminal grounds, franchises, etc., are complied with on the part of your committee this company will proceed with the construction of a line from connection with the Glendale line near San Fernando boulevard, Tropico, to Fourth street and Glendale avenue, Glendale, and will complete the said line within the term of one year Yours truly,

PAUL SHOUP.

In order to fulfill the conditions imposed on us, we immediately started to secure options on the private right of way, which has been practically secured or will be in a very few days. We met with very fair treatment from the owners of this right of way and in no case paid over 10 per cent above the real value of the property.

Now to complete these options covering the right of way it will be necessary to raise an amount of $40,000.00, the bulk of which must be raised within sixty days and the balance in ninety days, according to the expirations of these options.

The money will be raised by apportioning each lot or piece of property in the district benefited and will average about $17.50 per lot. Of course, it is true that some property will be benefited more than other pieces, depending upon the distance from the line and also class of the property. A committee has therefore been appointed to classify and graduate the district, thereby arriving at a just and fair apportionment for each piece of property.

All money collected will be turned over to the Bank of Glendale, F. H. Vesper, treasurer, where it will be held in trust until the total amount is collected. If this agreement is not consummated in six months you have the privilege of withdrawing your money.

In order to overcome any deficiency that may arise through shortsightedness, illness, or financial difficulties of any property owner, we appeal to the business sense of all good citizens of Glendale to do their duty toward their city and not only pay their apportionment but as much more as the enhancement in value of their property will reasonably allow. Remember, if you can't pay your allotment on or before sixty days, please sign a note payable in any reasonable time in order that the committee will know what to expect. Also, DO IT NOW.

This is your chance to help just a little in giving Glendale what it wants, what it needs and what it must have and what you really owe to your city. At the same time, DON'T FORGET THE PERSONAL BENEFIT DERIVED THEREFROM.

Now, then, we leave it to your honor, your judgment and your patriotism if you are not buty-bound to carry out your part to the letter.

The committee in charge who have worked so laboriously and graciously in bringing this matter to a definite end, deserve much credit, and as there is yet much to be done in collecting the apportionments and other detail work, and as there is no compensation for their labor, doing this for the good of Glendale, we urge you to give this your prompt attention, visit the the headquarters prepared to pay your share or come in and tell them what you can do.

G. B. WOODBERRY, Secretary.

The officers and members of the committee are: R. A. Blackburn, chairman; G. B. Woodberry, secretary; F. H. Vesper, treasurer; Dr. R. E. Chase, G. B. Woodberry, T. W. Watson, Frank Zerr, H. C. Tupper, W. W. McElroy, P. A. C. Moore, Spencer Robinson, Mrs. M. L. Tight, J. A. Eppinger, Irving H. Oliver.

VALLEY VIEW

A Mr. Hanning and family have moved into the house at 1655 Oak street.

Frank L. Dietzel and wife have arrived from Mesa, Arizona, to visit with Mrs. Dietzel's mother, Mrs. O. L. Kilborn, at 1319 Lomita.

Valley View residents are greatly delighted over the prospect of a new school house in our section this fall. Perhaps some of them will remember that for two years past this correspondent has been hammering at that problem though laughed at for his temerity in proposing such a thing, at first. There are two men who are mainly responsible for carrying to a successful conclusion the negotiations for the purchase of the desired property for the school house grounds, Prof. Alton M. Brooks and Mr. J. E. Peters of the firm of Kilborn & Peters, and neither charged a cent for his services.

Miss Evelyn Irving of Los Angeles spent last week as the guest of Miss Fern Cook of 1601 West Sixth street.

Two new houses are being put up near San Fernando road, one on the north side of Vine and the other just back of it, on the south side of Seventh.

Harry Kendall, now living at 1516 Vine, has bought a lot on West Seventh, near Pacific, and will build a five-room house on it soon.

C. H. Darling and wife of 1628 Oak street are entertaining friends from the east.

M. L. Robinson and wife are moving this week from 459 Pacific avenue to 1251 West Tenth street.

GLENDALE HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The athletic teams had their pictures taken the first of the week for the Senior Stylus. The photos were taken by Weston of Tropico.

The Southern California championship debates take place next Friday night, May 23, when Manual Arts high of Los Angeles and the Santa Monica high send teams to each school. Mr. Root, the Glendale high's teacher in oratory, is a judge at the Manual Arts debate.

Miss Knepper spent last Thursday visiting the Berenda street intermediate and the Los Angeles high schools.

A number of senior girls are now busy making their graduating dresses. These girls are members of Miss Holloway's advanced class in sewing.

The following books have been added to the high school library the past week: The Leopard's Spots, three copies; Readings in Ancient History of Greece, International Bear Book—1912, Pilgrims' Progress, Tennyson's Idylls of the King, six copies; Goldsmith's Deserted Village, Ruskin's Sesame and Lillies, Irving's Oliver Goldsmith, three copies; California Blue Book—1911, The Heart of the Hills, The Call of the Wild, The Handbook of English History, two copies; Your United States, Woodturning, Windows—a book on stained glass, etc.; Literary Taste and How to Form It.

Miss Darsie used her visiting day last Monday by calling on the German, cooking and Latin classes of the Santa Monica high school.

Miss Viola Yorba, Laura Harkness and Helen Mosher are the soloists for the cantata "King Rene's Daughter," which is to be given by the Girls' Glee club of the high school in conjunction with the musical program to be given by the musical department. The Boys' Glee club, chorus class, Mandolin club and orchestra will also give selections. This program represents the school work of the year and a large attendance of the patrons would be appreciated. A small admission will be charged to enable the high school to make a final payment on the Victrola.

The high school baseball team met defeat last Saturday, when the South Pasadena team defeated them here, 6 to 5. Overconfidence was about the only reason known, as the game was very loose and full of errors.

A number of classes had their pictures taken by Weston this week, to appear in the Senior Stylus.

Quite a number of the students who will remain in school for next semester are considering the next year's courses, and the faculty ask that the parents assist the students in doing this before the time for the examination rush.

Money flew fast while the wily senior girls dished out that strawberry ice cream and handed out pickles and buns on Wednesday noon. The girls took in about twenty dollars.

The Student league oratorical contest try-out was postponed until next week.

A debate will be held in fourth period sophomore English class on Monday.

The high school baseball team will cross bats with the University of Southern California preps next Saturday, on the preps' diamond. A good bunch of Glendale rooters should accompany the team and help them win the last few league games.

Work on the Senior Stylus has been commenced and great care is being taken by those in charge to make this the best Stylus yet issued.

LOCAL TALENT TO BE HEARD AT PEOPLE'S CONCERT

A "local and vocal" program that would be a credit to any of the musical centers of the world is to be given next Sunday at the Auditorium in Los Angeles. The program will open with the smyphonic prelude to "Semele," by Eduardo Lebegott, the popular conductor of the orchestra.

The quartette from "Rigoletto," by Verdi will be given by Mrs. Adelina Lebegott, soprano; Mrs. Norma Rockhold Robbins, contralto; Roland Paul, tenor, and Ettore Campana, baritone. The sextette from "Lucia" will be given by the members of the quartette with the addition of W. G. Smith, tenor, and Charles Farwell Edson, basso.

"The Cloud," based on Shelley's poem, "The Cloud," is another of the charming compositions of Miss Fannie C. Dillon of Long Beach. The closing number on the program is the "Concert Overture," by Rudolph Kopp, who is a member of the Brahm's quintette of Los Angeles.

Only one more concert by the People's orchestra will be given this season. Prices of admission are from firteen to fifty cents.

A SPECIAL FEATURE FOR THE CHILDREN

Manager Thompson of the Glendale theater has arranged to give a prize to the child under sixteen years of age who will write the best letter to the theater describing the pictures that are shown there. The spelling, punctuation, writing and neatness will all be considered. The best letters will be read and prizes awarded every Tuesday evening. Leave the letters at the box office or send by mail. The regular prizes will still be given every Thursday. A good show will always be seen at the Glendale.

EAGLE ROCK RECIPROCITY

On Wednesday the Parent-Teacher association of Eagle Rock gave a reciprocity luncheon at the most beautiful home of Mrs. C. W. Young, vice president of the association, entertaining representatives of all the associations of Glendale, Rockdale, Tropico and Washington Park.

A most beautifully adorned table was set out of doors, with covers arranged for forty guests. During the luncheon hour presidents of the various associations were called upon for toasts and speeches. Mrs. Charles W. Miller made the address of the day, her topic being a study of eugenics. Mrs. Bessie Thew Miller of Eagle Rock composed an original monologue especially appropriate to the occasion. Mrs. Mary Howard Gridley of Glendale, being unable to attend, sent the following lovely bit of original poetry:

Our Reciprocity Rosary

Into the great reciprocity
Pot pourri jar,
We gather our rose leaves
From near and far.

Mix the most loving desires
With deep, earnest thought,
Pour in the oil of wisdom
By experience bought.

Stir well together these
Suggestions and hints,
Red rose leaves of thought
With pink and white tints.

Let each one take away
For her individual needs,
Enough of this mixture
For a string of rose beads.

Make a reciprocity rosary
Filled with fragrance of thought
From the sweet communion
We together have sought.

Count each bead a blessing,
Know that harmony is found
Reaching from our California
To Long Island sound!

Glendale guests who were present were Dr. Jessie A. Russell, Mrs. Plummer Van Zant, Mrs. Jessie B. Mock, Mrs. E. D. Yard, Mrs. Frank Hester, Mrs. Harry Hall, Mrs. Grace M. Roach, Mrs. E. S. ## SHENANDOAH

"Yes, yes! You have seen me before?"

"Long ago. You know Mrs. Haverill, the general's wife?"

"She is one of my dearest friends on earth."

"Then you can give her a message for me, to my poor little wife. She will know. Will the general be here soon? I—somehow I feel that I have not much time left. Doctor, my notebook!"

The surgeon took the notebook from an inner pocket, and at the same time a blood stained handkerchief fell out. The dying soldier saw it and with an effort said:

"Ah, yes; a message from Captain Heartsease. He was by my side—he had a Confederate uniform—so they didn't send him back with me."

Gertrude, kneeling by his side, took the handkerchief and, silently handed it to Jenny Buckthorn, who turned suddenly pale as she saw it, then hid her face in her hands and hastened away.

Still General Haverill did not arrive.

"Please write!" Frank whispered to Gertrude. "To—my wife—Edith. Tell our little son, when he is old enough to know, how his father died not how he lived. And tell her who was a mother to me that my father's portrait of her, which she gave to me in Charleston, helped me to be a better man. And—don't forget to tell them—I haven't it with me now—it was taken from me while I was a prisoner in Richmond by Captain Edward Thornton—Confederate secret service Let—me—sign—that"—

Gertrude, with tears streaming down her cheeks, held the poor boy's hand while he made a feeble scrawl on the page, then fell back lifeless. The surgeon gently laid the fold of the blanket over his face. He was dead.

"Present arms! Carry arms!" commanded the officer of the Federal guard as General Haverill came up, returning the salute as he passed.

"Am I too late?" he asked.

"I'm sorry, general," replied the Confederate surgeon. "His one thought, as we brought him through the lines, was to see you before he passed away."

"Poor boy—brave boy," muttered the general, turning back the fold of the blanket a moment to gaze upon the calm, sleeping face. "I am in the place of your father today. We will carry him to his comrades at the front. He shall have a soldier's burial in the shadow of the mountain where he sacrificed his young life in the purest valor of patriotism. Yonder mountain shall be his monument."

The Confederate soldiers stood in embarrassed silence for a little space. Then Major Hardwick said:

"Pardon me, general. We Virginians are your enemies—in the field. But you cannot mourn or honor this gallant young soldier more than we do. If you will allow us the privilege, now that we are here, we will carry him and accompany you to his last resting place."

General Haverill bowed his assent in recognition of the touching tribute. Then, with bared head, he knelt on the ground beside the bier for a minute. Rising again, with his old military mask of stolid self possession and with reversed sword, he made a sign to the officer of the Federal guard.

"Left face! Forward — march!" commanded the lieutenant. The Confederate soldiers again gently lifted their burden, and the pitiful cortege moved off slowly in the direction of the lengthening shadow of Three Top mountain.

Not a man in the whole army would have ventured a word to General Haverill, either at that moment or later, when he wrote a dispatch to the government, which was carried throughout the length and breadth of the land and enrolled in deathless history. And the name he wrote was that of "Lieutenant Frank Bedloe."

"The movement upon which our immediate hopes of success in this campaign are founded," he declared, "would have been impossible without the bravery and sacrifice of this young officer. His name must take its place forever on the roll of fame which his countrymmen are proud to honor."

CHAPTER XVII.
At the Eleventh Hour.

A small boy was hanging about in front of the Logan house in Winchester watching for General Sheridan to make his apearance and then asked:

"Please tell me, general, for my grandma, where you are going?"

With his mind full of the trouble caused by Confederate spies and informers, Sheridan replied gruffly:

"Tel her that I am going to Richmond or Petersburg or heaven or hell."

The boy ran away, but came back half an hour later and called out from the side walk:

"General Sheridan, my grandma says you can't go to Richmond because General Lee is there, and you can't go to Petersburg because General Beauregard is there, and you can't go to heaven because General "Stonewall" Jackson is there!"

It was the evening of Oct. 18. Washington via Maryland to rejoin the Federal army at Cedar creek, had arrived in Winchester late that afternoon.

The couriers who came up from the front to meet the general reported everything quiet at Cedar creek and the adjacent Fisher's Hill and, furthermore, that General Haverill's brigade of the Nineteenth corps was to make a reconnoissance on the right early next morning. This was sufficiently reassuring. The commander decided to take the night's rest in Winchester and proceed to the front the next morning.

When he was called at 6 a. m., faint sounds of irregular firing were heard in the distance to the southward, doubtless the result of General Haverill's reconnoissance. The firing did not cease, however, and after awhile it was more distinctly heard augmented by cannonading. Breakfast was ordered, and Sheridan's bold black, Rienzi, together with the horses of the staff officers and courtiers, stood pawing and champing before the door.

It was nearly 9 o'clock when the general got away. Then he hit the pike at a fairly good clip, not liking the sounds of sudden battle ahead, and somewhat nettled at the jeers and taunts of women in the doorways along the route. It was plain they had heard something by "grapevine telegraph." What they heard soon became apparent as the horsemen went over the rise at Mill creek, a couple of miles south of town.

There, as far as the eye could reach, up the long line of the valley pike, stretched and straggled the appalling spectacle of an army in broken retreat. Baggage wagons, wounded men, riderless horses and soldiers without guns told all too plainly a tale of panic and rout.

"Where are you going?" shouted Sheridan. "You should be facing the other way. What has happened?"

They told him the army had been surprised, defeated and all broken up and was in full retreat.

Sheridan did not rip about, swear and threaten—as yet. He was the coolest man of his party as he rode forward, slowly at first, thinking what he should do. The signal message "We will crush Sheridan's army," recurred to his mind with stunning force. But would the army suffer itself to be crushed, even in his temporary absence? He could not and would not believe it. The stragglers, being hurriedy questioned, described the situation as "awful."

"That means nothing from a pack of cowards who were the first to run away from the battlefield," declared Sheridan. "Come!" We'll soon find out for ourselves. This retreat would never have happened if I had been here. What I want to find out now is where Wright and the Sixth corps are and what the Nineteenth is doing. Wherever they are it's all right, or we'll soon fix it right."

Sending a courier back with a hurried order that the troops at Winchester should be deployed across the valley and that all fugitives should be halted and sent back to the front again, he now gave Rienzi his head. The gallant Morgan colt needed no spur. But the pike was so cluttered up with wagons and convoys of wounded soldiers and groups squatting around fence rail fires cooking coffee as a substitute for the breakfast of which Early's surprise had deprived them that long detours through the fields at one side or the other had to be made.

Nearing Newton, about halfway between Winchester and Cedar creek, General Sheridan found numerous companies of uninjured men and unscared men with their officers who needed only a word or the mere sight of "Little Phil," their magical commander, to turn about with cheers and march back toward the enemy. Among the first he recognized was an officer from his own state—Ohio—Major William McKinley of General Crook's staff.

"Where is the Nineteenth corps?" asked Sheridan.

"On the right, general—in the woods yonder," was the reply as the young officer sprang upon his horse, and, with a loud cheer, dashed away to spread the inspiring news of the chieftan's arrival on the field.

A couple of miles further on, in the rear of General Getty's division near Middletown, a whole bunch of regimental flags seemed to rise up out of the ground These proved to be the colors of the main body of Crook's troops, which had not retreated at all but reformed after the surprise of early morning and were now holding the line to the west of the turnpike. In one of the brigade commanders Sheridan here recognized another staunch Ohioan, whom he knew. This was Colonel Rutherford B. Hayes.

The meeting, in quick succession, of McKinley and Hayes under such momentous circumstances naturally impressed the general as of encouraging portent. Yet how little could he, or they, guess that within the span of a single generation both these promising young Ohio soldiers, fighting shoulder to shoulder with countless others of equal or more promise, were to become presidents of the United States of America.

Far other and more immediately pressing concerns occupied them on this day of the battle of Cedar creek. Colonel—or was it already general—Hayes, was able to answer more definitely the oft repeated inquiry for the Sixth and the Nineteenth corps.

"Here are two divisions of the Sixth corps intact. General—and on their right are Haverill's and Enroy's divisions of the Nineteenth. General Crook is on the extreme left with Merritt's cavalry. All that they want is to know that you're here."

"And all I want, by——," cried Sheridan, "is to get those men up that went to the rear. We'll whip those rebel rascals back and sleep in our old camps tonight!"

He now came full upon the newly forming Federal line of battle It was as if an electric thrill has been shot through the entire army from the moment of Sheridan's arrival on the field. Cheer after cheer rang out, to be taken up front and rear and far around before the real cause was known. Had re-inforcements come? Yes Little Phil was scorching down the pike, and he was a host in himself. Sure enough, there was his energetic small figure on the big horse, his eyes flashing, and his face glowing as he galloped along, hat in hand, just to show himself to the troops.

"It's all right!" he shouted. "We're holding them, and we'll lick them yet!"

The general rode on with his staff and escort, and in a minute more they were a distant, confused mass of dust and flying hoofs. Suddenly rolling cloud with a thunderbolt in its midst—the yellow haired, boyish Custer, the youngest general in the whole Union army, a dashing cavalry leader whom the enemy hesitated to shoot at, declaring that if he was not a southern cavalier he rode and fought like one. Custer, now at a tearing gallop, flew up to Sheridan, threw both arms around him and kissed him on the cheek in an irrepressible burst of boyish enthusiasm, then was off again like the wind.

It was not yet noon—Sheridan had come up at 10:30—and now the whole stream of men on Winchester turnpike was flowing southward instead of the other way, full of fight again. Another tense hour sped by—two hours—and still Sheridan was busy reforming and re-arranging his lines, passing the whole front of his infantry in review, until satisfied that their shattered morale was sufficiently restored to be relied upon once more for the aggressive work. The enemy's fire had noticeably slackened, but this was a sign to be acted upon with extreme caution until its significance could be definitely ascertained.

General Sheridan was still obsessed with the idea that Early's aggressiveness must be accounted for by heavy reinforcements, and that possibly Longstreet had joined him after all.

When toward the middle of the afternoon the Confederates made a bold, though unsuccessful, sally against General Haverill's division, and the right of the Sixth corps, commanded by General Buckthorn, the suspense became unendurable. Buckthorn received a note from the commanding general conveying an order, which he promptly transmitted to General Haverill, as the latter occupied the position from which the movement could be most effectively made: "Send Lowell's cavalry after that exposed battery at the edge of the woods, with the object of bringing in as many prisoners as possible.

"Colonel Lowell has just fallen. Will send his command under new leader, to be chosen at once."

A cavalry officer with haggard face and bloodshot eyes, bareheaded jacketless, his shirt open at the throat, rested in a field to the east of Middletown after a hurried inspection of his troopers to the left of the Union line. The colonel of a New York regiment rode up, offered a flask and said:

"Colonel West, have a drink with me before you go in again. You seem to need it, and I expect at this rate you'll be either in hades or in glory before an other hour passes."

Contrary to his reputation, habit and principle, Kerchival West accepted the kindly offer and swallowed a full sized man's drink, known, in trooper parlance, as a "slug." Then, as if suddenly possessed by a demon, he swung out his saber, and turning to his men with the signal cry of "Now for the charge!" led the cavalry in a brilliant sortie across the fenceless meadows and at the line of straggly woods where the advanced Confederate battery still belched forth defiance.

There was no withstanding such impetuosity. The charging troopers came back with flying colors, several captured guns and a score of prisoners—first herald of the turning tide of victory. But now their wild leader was not riding at their head. No one had seen him fall. Whoever knew what had happened to the individual forgot it in the jubilant excitement over the general result achieved.

The Federal line was now invincibly re-established. At 4 o'clock Sheridan ordered the grand charge, which was begun under his personal direction by the Nineteenth corps on the right and taken up by the successive commands along the line to the left, the cavalry on the flanks, charging at the same time. Then the Confederate batteries opened up, and the roar of artillery and the splitting crash of exploding shells mingled with the fierce roll of the musketry,

Colonel Robert Ellingham, in the southern ranks, wondered what was happening at Belle Bosket. In the forenoon he had swept with his men past the old place, facing northward. and seeing everything in flight ahead, capturing prisoners and recapturing their own men who had fallen into Federal hands, including the elusive Edward Thornton. Now the Confederates were passing the same point again, hurrying and still more hurried in the opposite direction, driven from the field they thought they had won, in the worst rout of which poor Bob had ever been a part.

"By the great horn spoon!" said General Buckthorn to General Haverill. "We're going to have as much trouble in holding our men back from charging the enemy now as we did to stop their retreat this morning."

It had been the intention of General Sherman to hold back his left after the enemy had been dislodged and by advancing his right to force the Confederates to the east of the valley pike, thus cutting off their retreat to Strasburg and Fisher's hill. But, even as the veteran Buckthorn had whimsically remarked, the troops were so bent upon avenging their reverses of the morning that there was no restraining them, and the whole line pressed on irresistibly until the old camps on Cedar creek had been regained, together with enough prisoners, guns, wagons and battleflags to turn previous mortification into riotous joy and make matter for a rousing dispatch to send to Washington

THE FIESTA SPIRIT

In the old days California was much given to the fiesta. Upon the slightest provocation whole communities were wont to quit work and to unleash their hearts in play. In this way they managed to have a lot of fun and to be supremely happy. They lived long and well.

In the mad hurry and scurry of these modern times Californians still endeavor to retain some of the fiesta spirit. In the midst of all the hard work they do they still stop, once in a while, to play. And they will do well never to wholly lose this old heritage which has come down to them from the Spanish pioneer and the days when California was glamorous with romance.—The West Coast Magazine.

When all are selfish, the sage is no better than the fool, and only rather more dangerous.—Froude.

AN ORDINANCE OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE CITY OF GLENDALE PROVIDING FOR THE INSPECTION OF DAIRIES, COWS, COW STABLES, VEHICLES, VESSELS AND BOTTLES FROM WHICH MILK IS SOLD AND DELIVERED IN SAID CITY, AND PROVIDING THE CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH MILK MAY BE SOLD TO THE INHABITANTS OF SAID CITY AND FIXING PENALTY FOR THE VIOLATION THEREOF.

The Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale do ordain as follows:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to bring or receive or to cause or permit to be brought or received into the City of Glendale for sale, or to sell or offer for sale, or cause or permit to be sold or offered for sale, or to have in possession for sale, exchange or delivery therein, any milk, cream or buttermilk or any condensed or evaporated milk or cream without first applying for and receiving a permit from the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale so to do in the manner hereinafter provided; provided, however, that this section shall not apply to condensed or evaporated milk or cream which is sterilized and contained in hermetically sealed packages, labeled with the name of the article and with the name of the person, firm or corporation by whom the same is prepared.

Sec. 2. Every applicant for any such permit shall file with the City Clerk a written application which shall set forth the name and address of any and all persons, firms or corporations from whom he is purchasing or obtaining or from whom he is intending to purchase or obtain, milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream and the number of gallons of milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream sold by him daily as near as he can estimate the same. Such application shall also contain a description of the property by street and number wherein or whereon the applicant conducts or proposes to conduct his place of business, and if the same has no street number, then such description as will enable the same easily to be found. If such permit be granted, it shall be the duty of the holder thereof to notify the City Clerk in writing of any change in the name or address of the persons, firms or corporations from whom he obtains his supply of milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream, at least one day before beginning to obtain any such article or articles from any such person, firm or corporation other than those named in his application, and it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to fail or neglect so to do.

Sec. 3. If it shall appear to the said Board of Trustees, upon considering such application, that the statements therein made are true, and that the applicant does not purpose selling or offering for sale any adulterated milk, cream or buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream, or any milk, cream or buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream below the standard as hereinafter defined and prescribed, and that the dairies, cows, cow stables, houses, vessels and vehicles from which such milk, cream or buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream is sold or offered for sale, or is supplied for the purpose of being sold, conform to the provisions of this ordinance and to the rules of the Board of Trustees, it shall be the duty of the said Board of Trustees to cause to be issued, without cost to said applicant, a permit to bring and receive into said city for sale, and therein to sell or offer for sale, milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream; provided, however, that such permit shall be granted only on the express condition that it shall be subject to suspension for a period not exceeding six months by the Board of Trustees in its discretion, upon proof to the satisfaction of said Board of a violation by the holder thereof, his servant, employe or agent, of any of the provisions of this ordinance, or any rule of the Board of Trustees relating to the inspection and sanitary condition of dairies and milk depots, or upon proof of violation by said holder of any law of the State of California, providing against the adulteration of milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream; and provided, further, that no such permit shall be suspended until after a hearing given by said Board of Trustees in the matter of the suspension of such permit, notice of which said hearing shall be given in writing and served upon the holder of such permit, or his manager or agent, which notice shall state the ground of the complaint against such holder, and the time and place where such hearing will be had. Such notice shall be served on the holder of such permit, by delivering the same to such person, or his manager or agent, or to any person in charge of or employed in the place of business of such holder, or by leaving such notice at the place of business or residence of such person with some person of suitable age and discretion.

If such notice is not served personally upon the holder of such permit, a copy of such notice, in addition to being served upon any one of the other persons named in this section, shall be deposited in the United States postoffice in a sealed envelope, postage fully prepaid, addressed to the holder of such permit, at the address of his place of business. Such notice shall be so served and mailed at least five (5) days prior to the date of such hearing.

Sec. 4. Such permit shall be good until the same is suspended for cause, or until the holder of such permit changes the location of his place of business, or conveys or otherwise disposes of the business of selling milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream; provided, however, that any person, firm or corporation who shall purchase any such business, for which a permit has been obtained and is in force at the time of such sale, may conduct and operate such business under such permit for a period of not more than thirty (30) days from and after the date of such sale, and such purchaser shall, during the said period of thirty (30) days, apply for and obtain a permit in the manner provided by this ordinance; and provided further, that if any holder of any such permit shall change or remove the location of his place of business, such holder may continue to conduct and operate such business under such permit for a period of not more than thirty (30) days from and after the date of such change or removal, and such holder shall, during the said period of thirty (30) days, apply for and obtain a permit in the manner provided by this ordinance.

Sec. 5. All dairies, cows, cow stables, houses, vessels and vehicles, whether within the city of Glendale or not, from which milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream is sold, or offered for sale, or is supplied for the purpose of being sold within the limits of said city, and all places and vehicles within said city in which milk, cream, buttermilk or condensed or evaporated milk or cream is sold, kept, carried or conveyed, shall be subject at all times to inspection by the Health Officer, or some one deputed by the Board of Trustees, and it shall be the duty of all persons owning or having charge of such dairies, cows, cow stables, houses, vessels or vehicles to allow such inspection, and to allow such dairies, cow stables, houses, vessels or vehicles to be entered by the Health Officer or any person deputed by the Board of Trustees for the purpose of such inspection; and in case the owner or person in charge of a dairy, cow, cow stable, house, vessel, or vehicle without said city, from which milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream is sold, or is supplied to the holder of a permit for the purpose of being sold within the limits of said city, refuses to allow such entry or inspection, then such holder shall, upon notification by the Health Officer, or some one deputed by the Board of Trustees, immediately discontinue selling or offering for sale any milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream, furnished or supplied by such owner or person so refusing.

All persons selling or offering for sale milk, cream, buttermilk or condensed or evaporated milk or cream within said city, or furnishing or supplying milk, cream, buttermilk, or condensed or evaporated milk or cream, to be sold therein, shall allow samples thereof to be taken by the Health Officer, or by the Milk Inspectors at any time when demanded.

Sec. 6. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell or offer for sale, or to cause or permit to be sold or offered for sale, or to have in possession for sale, any milk, cream, buttermilk, or any condensed or evaporated milk or cream, except in sealed bottles or other sealed receptacles; provided that the provisions of this section shall not apply to any of such articles sold at any dairy or milk depot, or sold to be consumed upon the premises whereon the same are sold.

Sec. 7. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation keeping for sale any milk, cream, buttermilk, skimmed milk, pasteurized milk, condensed or evaporated milk, or condensed or evaporated skimmed milk in any store, restaurant, bakery or other establishment, to fail, refuse or neglect to keep the same, at all times before the sale thereof, in a clean and well drained cooler or refrigerator. Such cooler or refrigerator shall be kept tightly closed at all times except when articles are being placed into or taken from the same, and shall be kept in such location, and under such conditions as shall be approved by the Health Officer.

Sec. 8. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation who uses in his or its business a wagon, cart or other vehicle, to fail, refuse or neglect to have and keep upon such wagon, cart or other vehicle a covering of canvas or other material so arranged as to protect securely the contents of such wagon, cart or other vehicle from dust and the rays of the sun.

THE ATTRACTION OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The magnificent climate and the ease with which a man may buy a home and provide for his offspring, are attractions which are bringing people out of the cold, inhospitable lands of the east, where frost and snow keep them inside seven or eight months in the year, and planting them on these garden spots; and more will follow in their wake as the years go on until these foothills and fertile valleys shall be filled with a happy, contented people, rich in all that the earth has to offer her children who come here to make their homes.

ETERNITY

Only by walking hand in hand with nature is it possible to disabuse the mind of the contracted belief that time is now and eternity tomorrow.

HAD BEEN BOTH

A clergyman who advertised for an organist received this reply:

I notice you have a vacancy for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I beg to apply for the position.

Making excuses takes time that is better spent in "making good."

But a bird in the hand doesn't annoy the early worm.

Some men never brag about themselves—and don't blame them.

It isn't any wonder that a man is annoyed when he gets the worst of a horse trade, as that was what he was trying to hand the other fellow.

And the morals of some men depend more on the police than they do on principles.

It doesn't take a man long to tire of posing as a good example.

When counting his blessings a man generally refuses to include his poor relations.

"I wonder why Mr. Smith's moustache has turned grey while his hair is still brown."

"Why, I suppose it is because he uses his mouth more than he does his head."

There is the cream puff, the powder puff, the newspaper puff, the man whose chest puffs, the puff of smoke, and the fascinating puffs the charming ladies wear, and what is the poor foreigner to do who is trying to learn the language?

Many buy to sell. Buying a lot for profit does not differ materially from buying thread, steamships, locomotives or elephants. The point is to get the thing just before it is overtaken by civilization; to be in a position to fill a want, a desire or a necessity, immediately before it reaches the stage of actual use—to know what other people want; to be able to get it or tie it up before they do.

The way to get a reputation for goodness is to be good.

"THE RESTITUTION PROMISES FOR THE WORLD."

The International Bible students of Glendale met last Sunday at 511 South Maryland street. This is one of a series of very interesting Bible studies that are being given in Glendale.

The leader in these class studies is Mr. S. H. Toutjian of Los Angeles, a very able and interesting instructor on Bible topics.

Many scriptures emphasizing the promises of Jer. 30:3, and 31:16, 17, proved clearly that the Jewish nation, both dead and living, are to be re-gathered to the land promised to their fathers, and not only that the Jews, but also the Samaritans and Sodomites, as well as the "Residue of Mankind," Acts 15:14-17, will be brought back from the grave, John 5:28, 29. ("All that are in the graves shall hear His voice and come forth") and receive "restitution"—restoration—to the perfect condition lost by the transgression of Father Adam. 1 Cor. 15:22.

These times or blessings have been spoken of by all the holy prophets, but are not to take place until the time indicated, Acts 3:19-21, at and during the presence of the Lord Jesus at His return or second coming.

Many have wondered why so many heathen and others have not heard and appreciated this wonderful gospel of Jesus Christ, but an answer was found in 1 Tim. 2:6, which indicates there will be a real, actual opportunity for everyone to know of the "Ransom for all," in "due time."

The study for next Sunday will be "The Restoration of the Earth to Edenic Conditions."

These Bible students' methods of study are unique in that they do not theorize and guess, but have scriptures on which to base their assertions.

All those interested in topical scripture study are invited to be present at 418 South Kenwood street next Sunday, May 18, 3 p. m.
